Growing Spectrum Catalogues

We've often wondered what happens to the expensive printed catalogues that many companies print annually and send out to all their clients. You will be well aware that it takes a lot of time, and money, to print a really good colour catalogue, and then as soon as it gets printed the product range starts changing and the catalogue is out of date! So printed catalogues are becoming a thing of the past. With the huge advancements being made with information technology and the amount of information being held on the web, it makes sense to attach our catalogues to our website. Using the website to list all the products means that the amount of information provided can be increased and this is readily available to anyone with internet access. The catalogue can of course still be printed by customers that want a paper copy of the products.

But wait there's more!

Get product information where ever you are. QR (Quick Response) codes are appearing on products all over the world. The little square box with the 'random pattern' links your mobile phone direct to a page on a website. The first thing to do is load a free QR code application onto your phone, this allows your phone to read the code. Then when you see a code simply scan the it with your phone and it will link to the website and give you lots of information about the product. You will see in the coming months that QR codes will start appearing on the backs of all our plant labels. This allows the customer to get lots on information about the product that they are considering buying and they will also be able to access more information about associated products, growing conditions, availability etc. the opportunities are endless!

Indenting Product

Why do it? Very simple really, to ensure that you can get the product when you want it during the year. As demand increases for product, the majority is indented or put on contracts. Unfortunately this means that some crops are sold out following the release of this catalogue and are never offered for sale during the year. So the answer to ensure supply is to put some numbers on your indent list and send it back to us. Our sales reps will come around and tell you when the stock is ready and ask you when you would like to take it.

New Releases

We are always looking to increase our range and introduce new lines to create interest in the garden centres for shoppers. As you read through the catalogue you will see a number of lines that are new to the market and new to Growing Spectrum.

Anthony Tesselaar Plants

In July 2009 we agreed to become a licensed grower of the Anthony Tesselaar range of plants. This range has been carefully selected from breeders throughout the world and each plant has to undergo a rigorous trial period before being released internationally.

Flower Carpet Roses. The back bone of the range is of course the Flower Carpet Rose range. Over 40 million Flower Carpet Roses have been sold throughout the world and breeding continues to further develop the range. The Flower Carpet Roses are all listed separately in the catalogue in bush, patio standard and tall standard grades.

Rose 'White Romance'. Added to the Tesselaar range internationally this rose is a 'high performer'. The buds are a florists dream, creamy white opening to white. The flowers hold well and have a delightful fragrance. Easy care, repeat flowering and disease resistant, they don't come better than this!

Cordylone 'Red Fountain'. The top selling Cordylone of all time and is now distributed throughout the world through the Tesselaar brand. 'Red Fountain' was even featured on the Oprah Winfrey show! Always in high demand we now have Red Fountain coming through in quantity.

Canna 'Tropicanna'. Nothing matches 'Tropicanna' and 'Tropicanna Gold' for the hot tropical look in gardens! They are gown from divisions and available through the summer months. The foliage colours are nothing short of spectacular and they are hardy, performing well throughout the country.

Fairy Magnolia Blush. Added to the Tesselaar range, 'Fairy Magnolia Blush' is being marketed internationally and doing extremely well. (Formerly known as Michelias, they are undergoing a name change to include all Michelia under the genus of Magnolia) Highly fragrant cream flowers with a blush of pink smother this shrub, beautiful.

Breeding New Plants and PVR (Plant Variety Rights)

The breeding of new plants can be a hugely rewarding process, creating something new and completely different to anything ever produced or grown before, being able to name it as a new variety, and to see it grown and enjoyed in gardens around the country and possibly internationally. But the breeding process can be lengthy and often a costly process. To recover the costs the owner of a new plant can choose to protect their plant by applying for PVR protection.

To do this the owner of the plant must be able to prove, through a monitored trial process, that their new plant is distinctly different from any other variety. This is compulsory for any new variety be it an Apple or a Coprosma. Once the plant has passed the trial and been approved for PVR protection the owner of the variety is entitled to issue licenses for people to grow the plant, and to accept agreed royalties from the propagation or sale of the plant. These royalties will hopefully cover the on going PVR protection costs, allow the breeder to recoup the breeding costs and maybe even collect some profit from the new variety.

If a license is not issued to other growers then no one else is entitled to propagate and sell the plant. Doing so can lead to prosecution under the PVR Act. If the owner of the new plant decides not to protect the plant through the PVR process then anyone can grow and sell the variety.

As growers we are all required to follow the legislation and not to grow any plants that we do not have licenses for. We are also required to list the PVR grant number on the labels and in our catalogues so that everyone knows that it is a protected plant. So that's the reason why you will often see; (PVR111) listed in a plant description!

For lots more information and to check on the status of a plant variety go to the PVR website;

We continue to trial new plants to add to this range.
